

Graduation Rates:

Students Who Started 9th Grade In 2001, 2002, 2003, and 2004

The Bottom Line

- Statewide graduation rates are steadily increasing overall, according to reports from school districts. However, overall rates are still too low.
- A fifth year of high school increases the graduation rate especially among high need students.

The Bottom Line

- The gap between Black and Hispanic students as compared with White students is narrowing.
- Graduation rates for English Language Learners and Students with Disabilities are far too low. This is a serious problem.
- Graduation rate growth and performance are too uneven among the Big 5.
- Among students who graduate, more are earning a Regents Diploma.
